SUBJECT : Briefing of Defense Intelligence Agency on
CIA Technical Intelligence Activities

REFERENCE:

1. Attached is a letter that the Director sent to General Carroll regarding the organization of DIA and the DCI's desire that we support that agency to the extent possible. You will note the stress that the Director's letter places on technical intelligence gathering, analysis, evaluation and dissemination, as well as research.

2. We have set up for 10:30 a.m. Friday, 8 June, in the DCI's conference room (7 D 64) a briefing for Lieutenant General Carroll, Lieutenant General Quinn and Rear Admiral Frankel, the top three officers in the Defense Intelligence Agency. General Carroll indicated that before directing his planning officers to work in this field he would like to be apprised of our work in the more exotic collection areas.

3. Attached is a schedule for the briefing, copies of which have been sent to General Carroll. The briefing is designed to cover in the first hour the broad area of Agency activities in these fields, to be followed by questions and explanations in greater detail, according to the desires of General Carroll. I will arrange to have an over-all chart on the organization of the Agency available, and request that each of the briefers provide for whatever graphic assistance they will need.

Lt. General Joseph F. Carroll
Director, Defense Intelligence Agency
Department of Defense
Washington 25, D. C.

Dear Joe:

In confirmation of our discussions this morning in Secretary McNamara's office, I believe it most important that you, in completing the organization of DIA, take full advantage of all facilities and services established at CIA and hence available to you.

I am sure you are generally familiar with CIA's organization and the scope of its activities; however it occurred to me that you may not be thoroughly familiar with certain operations which might be of importance to you. I am thinking of areas of technical intelligence gathering, analysis, evaluation and dissemination as well as research conducted in these fields. I therefore propose that you, at your convenience, review the Central Intelligence Agency organization and activities, either personally or through your Staff, so that you can plan to make maximum use of the facilities available to you.

As you will note, I am directing a copy of this letter to General Carter and, in doing so, suggesting that he discuss the subject of this letter with you at your early convenience.

Sincerely,

151
John A. McCone
Director
